

"101 Uses for Cow & Chicken"
by Pete Nicholls characters (c)1997 Hanna-Barbera

SETUP

Cow and Chicken travel to the 89 cent store to help Mom shop. Once there, they get bored and begin wandering around. They find a price-tag-machine and begin goofing around with it. We cut away to see the Red guy butt-walking down one aisle and full-body rolling down another. He's looking for something, but can't find it. He whispers what he is looking for into the ear of a store clerk who directs him to aisle six.

Meanwhile, in aisle six, Cow and Chicken are still messing around with the price-tag-machine. They've even price-tagged themselves. Just then, Red appears at the other end of the aisle, screams "PANTYHOSE" with glee and begins shoveling the pantyhose into his cart. He is so frantic in his grab for pantyhose that he doesn't realize it when he snatches up Cow and Chicken.

Later at the check out counter, the sales clerk drags each package of pantyhose across the beeping scanner. Red fails to notice as the clerk drags Cow and Chicken across as well. Of course the clerk doesn't notice either.

BODY

Not until Red gets Cow and Chicken home does he realize that he's bought them. He even checks the receipt to be certain he did pay for them himself. He reads it aloud: "Pantyhose, pantyhose, pantyhose, pantyhose, pantyhose, pantyhose, Cow, pantyhose, pantyhose, pantyhose, pantyhose, Chicken. Well I guess that means I own you now! Why, I'VE ALWAYS WANTED A COW AND CHICKEN!"

But Red feels that if he paid for Cow and Chicken, he should get some sort of use out of them. He proceeds to try Cow and Chicken out as various common items, failing miserably each time.

He tries using Chicken as a neck-tie, a toothbrush, a cotton swab, a scrub brush, and a throw rug. While Cow is used as a stole, a toe-nail-clipper, a vacuum cleaner, a couch and a horse. While they are both used as a set of wind-chimes.

RESOLUTION

Finally Red gives up, decides they are defective and that he is going to take them back to the store to exchange them for more pantyhose. But when the clerk at the store asks for his receipt (the only requirement of exchanging something) Red discovers that he has lost it, despite the number of times he has flaunted it to Cow and Chicken as proof-of-ownership. Meanwhile, Chicken has rediscovered the price-tag-machine and has tagged Red.

Cow and Chicken see Mom who is still shopping in the store. They exit the store with her and just as Red is about to leave the store to go after them, a clerk stops him pointing to his price tag while explaining that he hasn't been paid for yet. Red tries to protest, but the clerk simply orders him to aisle five, where they stock the red guys with no pants.

The Devil shrugs as we iris out on him.

END.